We reproduced, a few days since, from the Chicago Republican, a recent conversation between a correspondent of that paper and a Mrs. Wilcox, formerly Mrs. Armstrong, of Menard county, Illinois, Among the interesting incidents mentioned by the correspondent as having been obtained from this good old woman, was an account of the successful defence of her son, young Armstrong, on a charge of murder. The impressive scenes of that trial-the apparent pelessies of the cause—the triumphant defence made by the unpaid attorney—the shame or the perjured principal witness the joy of the boy restored to freedomthe gratitude of the long-sorrowing moth. er, and the Christian sympathy of Abraham Lincoln for "the widowed and the fatherless," were all faithfully portrayed by a writer in the CLEVELAND LEADER on the morning following Mr. Lincoln's nomination at Chicago in 1860. The sketch was extensively copied and read at the time, and has since found a place in almost every life of Lincoln published The writer witnessed the trial, which occurred at Beardstown, the county seat of field, Mr. Lincoln's home at that time, It was, probably, one of the most remarkable trials on record. The testimony was positive and overwhelming, and the volunteer attorney seemed during the examina-fion of witnesses to be making no defence at all. He rested the case upon a single close of this trial. In addressing the jury, he had said: " If justice be done, as I believe it will be, yonder sun, before its setting, western horizon when the verdict "Not guilty" was rendered. The prisoner and his weeping mother for a time absorbed

"Yes," replied Brough, "but Abraham Lincoln will be the coolest man in the city. I know him well, and I will warrant that you might stick a pegging awi in his such to the handle and you would not draw a drop of blood," The Agricultural Bureau. A Washington despatch states that the Ohio State Board of Agriculture, the Ohio State Pomological Society, and the Illinois very high, thirty-five feet on the shoals and State Horticultural Society, without a dissenting vote, have requested the removal of the present Commissioner of Agriculture, on the ground of incompetency.

These Associations ought to be compe tent judges upon the question on which age. Many million feet of logs have been they have expressed themselves so plainly and unanimously; and the incompetence of which they complain must be glaring indeed to have provoked such an unusual course toward the head of a Bureau. It is due to his position that Commissioner Newton should at least pay some regard to the rules of syntax and prosody.

Colonel Royal Taylor, formerly a prom inent citizen of Cuyahoga, was handson ly caned a few evenings since by the clerks of his office at Columbus. It took all of them to do it, though, and the Colonel seems to stand the infliction remarkably well.
